

CMI Staying the Course

Do your good intentions regarding homeschooling sometimes fall through the cracks? Don't worry; you're normal. We all tend to set great goals and sometimes fall short of those goals.

Do you find yourself sluggishly off track and in need of fuel? Is your walk with the Lord fading? We can help. The Lord has the all answers we need, and we are eager to share with you from our homeschooling experiences, what we've learned from our successes and our failures. Homeschooling has been around for many years, and fortunately you and I can take advantage of the lessons learned by those who blazed the trail!

You'll be amazed by the support that's available—online, in your community, and around the world. Let us put you in touch with homeschoolers who've been there and done that—and lived to tell about it, with great joy!

Things that need to be done don't get done unless you are intentional about them. What did you want to do with the kids this year? What are your priorities in your homeschool? Do you want more fun family time? We can help you discover how to stay the course with ideas that are proven and trustworthy. We can introduce you to practical resources that will equip you to do an excellent job, and we'll encourage you to homeschool in the Lord's strength—not your own.
