

and friendly competition are modern accretions to ancient Olympism. These values do not represent the central impulse in sports. Neither do they have any real cultural power. This impotence is highlighted by the contemporary importance attached to winning in the modern Olympics.

REFERENCES

1. Hale, W. D. (ed), 1984. The Horizon Book of Ancient Greece, Bonanza Books, New York, p. 48.
2. Murray, A. S., 1988. Who's Who in Mythology: Classic Guide to the Ancient World, second edition, Bracken Books, London, p. 22.
3. Murray, Ref. 2, pp. 22-23.
4. Taylor, I. T., 1984. In the Minds of Men: Darwin and the New World Order, TFE Publishing, Toronto, p. 291.
5. Bennett, B. L. and van Dalen, D. B., 1971. A World History of Physical Education, second edition, Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey, p. 35.
6. McIntosh, P. C., 1963. Sport in Society, C. A. Watts, London, pp. 2-3.
7. Swaddling, J., 1992. The Ancient Olympic Games, British Museum Press, London, p. 7.
8. Kraus, R., 1971. Recreation and Leisure in Modern Society, Prentice-hall, Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey, pp. 132-134.
9. Brasch, R., 1971. How Did Sports Begin?, Longman, Sydney, pp. 1-2.
10. McIntosh, Ref. 6, p. 3.
11. McIntosh, Ref. 6, p. 2.
12. Kraus, Ref. 8, p. 135.
13. Shelley, quoted in:
Knox, B., 1993. The Oldest Dead White European Males and Other Reflections on the Classics, W. W. Norton, New York, pp. 26-27.
14. Knox, Ref. 13, p. 27.
15. Knox, Ref. 13, p. 27.
16. Cited in:
Jenkyns, R., 1980. The Victorians and Ancient Greece, Basil Blackwell, Oxford, p. 69.
17. Arnold, quoted in:
Jenkyns, Ref. 16, p. 68.
18. For an extended treatment of the origins of Muscular Christianity and its fusion with Social Darwinism to create conducive conditions for the revival of Olympism, see:
Harker, B. R., 1996. Strange Fire: Christianity and the Rise of Modern Olympism, Hartland Publications, Rapidan, Virginia.
19. Mangan, J. A., 1982. Philathlete extraordinary: a portrait of the Victorian moralist Edward Bowen. Journal of Sport History, 9(3):34.
20. Mangan, J. A., 1975. Play up and play the game: Victorian and Edwardian public school vocabularies of motive. British Journal of Educational Studies, 23(3):324.
21. Mangan, Ref. 20, p. 324.
22. Gay, P., 1995. The Cultivation of Hatred, Fontana Press, London, pp. 35-36.
23. Quoted in:
Krüger, A., 1993. The origins of Pierre de Coubertin's religio athletae. Olympika: The International Journal of Olympic Studies, 2:91.
24. Krüger, Ref. 23, p. 91.
25. Krüger, Ref. 23, p. 95.
26. Krüger, Ref. 23, p. 91.
27. Krüger, Ref. 23, p. 92.

Barry R. Harker has a Diploma in Physical Education and a Bachelor of Human Movement Studies from the University of Queensland, a M.Ed, from the University of New England, and a Ph.D. in philosophy of education from James Cook University of North Queensland. Dr Harker resides in Hervey Bay, Queensland, Australia, and operates a management and education consultancy in conjunction with his wife, Cecily.

QUOTABLE QUOTE: What is Evolution?

'From first to last it is a dish of rank materialism cleverly cooked up . . . And why is this done? For no other reason, I am sure, except to make us independent of a Creator

Adam Sedgwick, Woodwardian Professor of Geology at Cambridge University, in his 1861 writings after reading Darwin's The Origin of Species, quoted from Clark, Ronald, 1984. The Survival of Charles Darwin, Random House, New York, NY, p. 139.